Among those of us charged with sustaining and nurturing an appropriate system of higher education, there has been much concern and debate over where we are going, what our responsibilities should be toward the future, and what must be done to insure our future viability.

We who are associated with this remarkable university — founded by a man of extraordinary vision, Asa Packer — naturally have Lehigh's self-interest as our primary focus. But Lehigh cannot be set apart from other colleges and universities for, in truth, their success and our own are interwoven by way of the attitudes, requirements and laws that our culture imposes upon us.

In recent years, higher education has sustained chinks in its armor. There are those who say "I can make more as a plumber than as a teacher, therefore I elect to be a plumber." And there are those who say that, whatever its merits, college no longer can guarantee lucrative positions for all those upon whom it bestows degrees. So our American colleges and universities, which called most of the shots until the turbulent demise of the Sixties, now appear to be called upon to justify themselves. But unanimous agreement on college education or any other subject is a rare commodity — rarer still in a pluralistic society such as ours — and such sniping at colleges and universities should challenge us, even if it hardly surprises us.

Lehigh's defense might well be that it is a special kind of university. And universities that are special in terms of accomplishments, prestige, and success of their graduates face special responsibilities — for they are, in a sense, the elite. And Lehigh is clearly among them. "When you get below the size level of a Harvard or a Yale, Lehigh is a very good place to be," is the way one of our professors summed it up. Consider the fact that Lehigh received 300 applications for a teaching vacancy in the biology department, and twice that many for a post in English. What this means is that Lehigh can do very well in terms of obtaining the best possible people for its faculty. I can assure you that today we are competing successfully with Princeton, Berkeley, et al, in securing exemplary people.

Lehigh can point to the fact that 85 percent of its professors with the rank of assistant professor or above hold Ph.D.s, and that they comprise 70 percent of the faculty. Where the national ratio of students to faculty is typically 16 to 1, Lehigh has a faculty member for every 11 students. At last count, we had 417 faculty members as well as over 100 full-time "equivalent faculty" — including graduate students who are teaching or engaged in significant research. All of these indicators point toward excellence in education at Lehigh.

It used to be that Lehigh talked about its success in the job market, and we may still do that with justification. The university continues to provide a disproportionate share of the people who manage and control business, or who otherwise are engaged at the highest levels of their professions. The demand for our graduates continues to be strong. The engineering job scare caused by the cancellation of contracts in the aerospace industry barely affected Lehigh because few of our graduates have been involved in that area of engineering. The emphasis in engineering may be changing to the biomedical area, or towards ecology, but the demand for the kind of engineers we produce will continue to remain strong.

At Lehigh we mean it when we say we do not "train engineers." Instead, we educate students through an engineering — or business, or arts and science — curriculum. The difference is that the individual should leave here with the adaptability to perform whatever job has to be done during his working years. When you consider that the explosive growth of knowledge, which, when measured by the number of books, articles and technical papers, doubles every ten years, the significance of the Lehigh theory of education becomes apparent. The other explosion is that of relevance, and we are closely attuned to the changing needs of our students. We know that the tradition of classical philosophy will always have its place, but we also try to offer more pragmatic courses as well.

So I am saying that Lehigh is in an especially strong position. In a society which still places a high priority upon college education for large numbers of people, despite the demurrers, it is natural enough that there will be a wide range of quality and specialization among institutions of higher learning. During the coming years it may well be that there will be those institutions that cannot survive, but I can assure you Lehigh will not be among them. As of the fall of 1972, there were 2,665 public and private colleges in the United States. It's not easy to envision all those colleges making the grade, and good wishes won't save them. There are those like Lehigh with acknowledged excellence, or distinctive personalities, and they may well have the best chances at survival.

We are discussing Lehigh and the elite university. The term "elite university" is not one of my choosing, but one long used among educators. "Elite university" might be simply defined as one that attracts a large proportion of students of outstanding intellectual ability. If we are to accept that definition, Lehigh falls well within the higher echelon of the elite. Excellence of scholastic performance is Lehigh's strongest point, and that is widely recognized. And yet, perhaps out of modesty, Lehigh people tend not to think of themselves as "elite." Others recognize our unique standing. For example, we continue to attract large numbers of well-qualified students while others face the concurrent problems of empty seats and deficit budgets. Lehigh had an unexpected over-acceptance for the fall of 1973 — 1,030 students, the second-largest class in our history — and you will find here neither empty seats nor red ink.

If we are, in fact, an elite university — and I believe we are — then we must continue to provide for our outstanding students an opportunity for education that is of exceptionally high quality, both for the benefit of the individual and for the progress that science and technology require. More than that, however, we must on a higher level prepare our students to work toward a "more humane, just, and civilized society," in the words of Professor T. R. McConnell, founder of the Center for Research and Development in Higher Education.

One of McConnell's former students, Sir Eric Ashby, elaborated on the societal ramifications of the elite university in a 1971 essay. He wrote: "All civilized countries . . . depend upon a thin clear stream of excellence to provide new ideas, new techniques, and the statesmanlike treatment of complex problems. Without the renewal of this excellence, a nation can drop to mediocrity in a generation."

If we are excellent, then, it follows that we have a moral obligation to continue to provide that "thin, clear stream of excellence" without which our nation will sink into a morass of mediocrity. I can assure you that Lehigh is providing, and will continue to demand, excellence.

Sweeping quickly over the plains, wending through widened river gaps and mountains, climbing the graduated contours of a million years of evolutionary progress, looming lazily against the magenta Pennsylvania skies, as an innocent nation sleeps in eternal silence, so, too, she sleeps. The seeping slows and the glass of a thousand powers enlarges the scape . . . it yields . . . Clemenceau called her le chateau, to Plato she was the Republic, 'o Caesar, his prized empire: Vedi, Vici, Veni on her face. Rousseau dubbed her for all time — the noble savage; to Nietzsche she was a superwoman, a Zarathustra; to deLeon a veritable fountain of youth. FDR once called her the Big Deal. Napoleon, after a visit en brief, mysteriously entitled her la Waterloo. To the master l'homme de Renaissance Da-Vinci, she was — but the Mona Lisa. To Justice Holmes she meant the excitement of yelling fire in a crowded theater. Gershwin named his most adored piece in honor of her — she is all a Rhapsody in Blue. Louis Quatorze is known to have patterned his Tuilleries palace after her, apres moi, le deluge. And . . . screaming wildly over those thundering plains which spread before her, across the evermoving sliver of her water ribbon, there, neatly nestled like a malignant tumor upon the breast of ol' South Mountain, she blurts her bubonic being, yearning to be heard, distressed only by the possibility of no one hearing her. . . . Perhaps of all the epithets, phrases, names and designs which have been drawn from the bosom of her soul, two such titles ring resounding dulcet tones through time's dampening curtain: Melville nailed her as his Great White Whale; even greater though was Buchminster Fuller who hung one on her which she still bears, despite the intimidating pictures of her founding and framing fathers whose dusty images adorn her dim highways to learning — he called her "The Spaceship" . . . and so she screams . . . Call Me Dravo! . . . But her story is not merely one of history evermore, no, indeed, it is written into the very structure of her being. To know her is to know a great wine, or a famous cabinet maker. Her taste, her age, her craftmanship, all strive for their recognition separately but yet together, with a symmetry of a triangular three. We must delve into her being, to the men who have built her being, to men like Arthur Katect, who designed her walls, exterior and room interior. Katect has said, possibly loud enough for all to hear, that he has used a distinct philosophical style, one which echoes the sentiment of the era from which it was born. Burning with the light of reason, lighting our ignorant ways but one step ahead, Katect has called her room design the Tabula Rasa: "Like Locke's ideal of ideas, the walls are wet plaster, ready to accept the diseased sneezes of our forty assembled influenza sufferers; when left to harden we are wanting to find ourselves a more impressionistic enclosure, bumpy, yet a uniquely unified relief." If Dravo's being is one of a physical entity, dependent upon every architectural niche for expression of such being, so must she be reliant on those who litter her milky corridors with humanage. It can be only joy to one's ears, as even Gershwin has told us, to hear the combined rhapsodies of symphonic volume and tone. As Dravo screams her name across the vast land which rolls on before her, so her many moods of music wail incessantly over the land whose name bears the Latin derivation — quad. A statement of artistic whole, a gestalt of quadrophonic, dominating a similarly vibrating quadrophonic area. What better area to relieve oneself in such a thoroughly stimulating environment than the well-lit back alleys which serve as the veins and arteries of her body electric. Could her halls but speak, they would tell us of the eternal epics of Carthaginian battle, those noble fights against the Spartans and the pouring of molten lead upon thousands of mobbing, naked human forms from her mighty battlements. With lead poured only in short supply, the ingenious legionnaires who defend her lofty position search out other modes to keep the swarming enemy from her sanctified womb. But just as Caesar's brave soldiers required rest from the ungodly long hours of defense against Cannibal's threatening forces, so too must her righteous defenders periodically displace themselves from the all of camp, from the static mania which the sputtering radiators allow no escape from, away from the other restless warriors who dither about beseeching her bowel's stolid lining for guidance, and most importantly withdraw themselves from being in and part of her infectious whole. In particular, her turrets . . . having seen the wounded limp before them in a sick parade to a sickening cadence, they alone understand the hurlings of outrageous fortune at her defenders . . . but they do not weep alone. Covered with soft goose down, silken to the touch, sensually sinewing through each room, she calls her own, timing all together like a deft seamstress with her golden spun thread, thin and airy in the morning light — her pipes! Oh! The pipes! Those softly screaming pipes — do not wonder for whom they toll, be well assured that they toll for thee. But alone they serve as only a glimpse of her true treasures. Towers projecting in staggering proportion undeniably beautify her, but depth must dominate the particulars if she is not to slip quickly from gaze. Within her depths Pompeiin-tilted lustral basins stand as a crowning nest of robins in her hair. These eternal rooms of internal need echo but too well the remains of the past. The food of her mind devoured and discarded, her core being plucked only to be brutally cast aside, such are the echoes of her true spirit, a whisper of steamy romanticism as loud as the din of battle, so are her rooms of daily need. As if this were not enough, staggering stairwells unify once and for all what is dynamically Dionysian and Apollonian. The force, life against death, Eros va. Civilization, one Dravo brother against another, such seething juxtapositions divide her spirit while in true fashion unifying her place as a statement of the whole. This alone swells and climaxes her symphonic representation, her menage a trois; what could be more appropo, more cul de sac, more panhellenic and Scaenitura than the loneliness of her three million eyes, grimly peering over what Fitzgerald called the ash heaps; this, then, as now and forever, is the gestalt . . . food of her veins and arteries. We are gladly enchained in the fire and shadow of her cave, waiting endlessly to emerge and see real light; we can only remember that within her we have seen the lucid reasons for classical musical unity and its fortifying impartation to us . . . she stands, testimony to a million sleeping men and women who rest confident upo. her love to watch over the valley, of her water ribbon . . to Kant she was the categorical imperative while to Einstein, a unified universe. To David, Goliath, to Samson, Delilah. To Faulkner. . . the Sanctuary. Eliot named his great poem for her, The Wasteland. Some years ago — never mind how long precisely — she was created and never will she perish; she is burned mercilessly into the conscience of an innocent nation . . . call me Dravo she screams . . . Moses called her . . .

Of all the creatures that were made he (man) is the most detestable. Of the entire brood he is the only one — the solitary one — that possesses malice. That is the basest of all instincts, passions, vices — the most hateful. . . . He is the only creature that inflicts pain for sport, knowing it to be pain . . . Also — in all the list he is the only creature that has a nasty mind.

Did you tackle that trouble that came your way
With a resolute heart and cheerful?
Or hide your face from the light of day
With a craven soul and fearful?
And though you be done to the death, what then?
If you battled the best you could;
If you played your part in the world of men,
Why, the Critic will call it good.
Death comes with a crawl, or comes with a pounce,

Onward it crept with added strength,
  With never a thought of fear or pride.
It followed the light through the crevice's length
  And unfolded itself on the other side.
The light, the dew, the broadening view
  Were found the same as they were before;
And it lost itself in beauties new,
  Just as it will for evermore.

It is Christmas day in the workhouse, and the cold, bare walls are bright
With garlands of green and holly, and the place is a pleasant sight;
To smile and be condescending, putting on pauper plates.
To be hosts at the workhouse banquet they've paid for — with the rates.
And what do you think they told me,
mocking my awful grief,
That the house was open to us,
but they wouldn't give out relief.
Back through the filthy byways!
Back through the trampled slush!
Up to the crazy garret,
wrapped in an awful hush;
My heart sank down at the threshold,
and I paused with a sudden thrill,
For there in the silvery moonlight,
my Nance lay cold and still.

When I am old, my friends will be
Old and infirm and bowed like me;
'Twill be no vain desire of mine
In rich and costly dress to shine;
And noon's broad, fervid, earnest light
Be shaded in the solemn night,
Till, like a story well-nigh told,
Will seem my life — when I am old.
Or find my lengthened days consoled
By God's sweet peace — when I am old.

  You into oblivion's abyss.

To that fair-haired youth may a pitfall be."

EXIT

June 22/Memo — Albert Zettlemoyer to W. Deming Lewis: Vihon left this morning for Harvard. I know you wanted him farther away, but Nome Law School has no openings.

July 3/Student Diary: Fall semester began today. We seem to start earlier every year.

July 25/Student Diary: Had to buy books today, so I packed a lunch and ended up missing dinner, too. The bill was $203. I'm not sure the bookstore jacks up prices, but they have a diamond-studded cash register. After I had bought the books, my bag ripped, as it has every semester since I've been here. I think they either make the bottoms out of tissue paper or drop lead weights in the bags as they pack them.

Sept. 10/Student Diary: The leaves around here are so deep that I breathe through a hollow reed on my way to class. Buildings and Grounds finally sent some people out to rake them, but two of them disappeared, along with a tractor.

Sept. 15/Bandie's Diary: We played the Centennial Song, with the new words I've written, at today's football game. Next week the Glee Club will sing it at Cornell.

Sept. 22/Bandie's Diary: The new words to the Centennial Song are identical to those of Cornell's Alma Mater.

Sept. 26/Brown and White: An attempted holdup of the snack bar was foiled today by the campus police. Three hapless robbers, apparently unfamiliar with Lehigh, were emptying the cash register when eight campus policemen walked in for a coffee break. Two other policemen, assigned to regular duty alongside the candy machines, were in the men's room at the time. One policeman was injured when he shot himself in the foot as he pulled his gun from its holster, but there were no other injuries.

Oct. 10/Letter — George Beezer to W. Deming Lewis: Dear Dr. President Sir, I sure do hope you liked the Horizons I put out for you last week, I'm sorry if our lead story, "The Armadillos of Lehigh: A Lost Breed," was kind of controversial, but I figured I ought to show my critics I can handle the hot issues without any reprisals. I can, can't I?

Oct. 17/Letter — Charles Vihon to Ruth Hurley: My Cadillac ran out of gas today. Talk to Big Al for me and see if I can have 10 grand to buy another one.

Oct. 21/Brown and White: The band today broke from 67 years of tradition and allowed three coeds to march at today's football game. The girls played and marched to "I Wonder Who's Kissinger Now" in the North end zone, while the rest of the band performed at midfield.

Oct. 31/Memo — Chaplain Hugh Flesher to William Quay: While I am quite willing to go along with your plans to renovate the Packer Memorial Church for occasional use as a theater, I must protest the installation of a "flying trapeze" and a "big ring." Dignity can only bend so far.

Nov. 10/Brown and White Concert Review: While Keith Snyder cracked his gum, snapped his fingers, and danced in the aisle, the other ten people who attended his "Multi-Media Spectacular: The Archies" were plainly disgusted. Apparently believing The Archies were a live group, the Student Activities Council paid NBC $10,000 to have them appear, only to find that their act consisted of four Archie hand-puppets rocking back and forth while "Sugar, Sugar" played over and over again in the background. The puppets, the victrola, and Snyder himself were all pelted with tomatoes and cabbages when the song came on for the ninth time.

Nov. 18/Brown and White: Lafayette pranksters sabotaged the Lehigh-Delaware swim meet this evening by stocking Taylor Pool with piranha. In the first event, run before the fish were discovered, seven of the eight swimmers set world records. The other failed to finish.

Nov. 20/Brown and White: In another round of Lehigh-Lafayette hijinks, Lafayette students firebombed the car of President W. Deming Lewis today, seriously injuring him and killing his black chauffeur. Lewis was enroute from his home to his office in the Alumni Memorial Building at the time.

Dec. 6/Brown and White: The Lehigh snow plow was badly damaged today when it skidded off an icy road and plunged into the Kappa Alpha fraternity living room. The plow had been attempting to climb the hill toward fraternity row for over an hour, but was encountering difficulty because "We forgot to put on snow tires," in the words of one employe.

Dec. 14/Brown and White: The Board of Trustees today cited financial risks in rejecting a law school for Lehigh, but denied being old-fashioned and overly conservative. In other action, they passed a resolution stating "All aspirin's alike" and declared war on Japan for "their treacherous attack on Pearl Harbor."

Feb. 2/Memo — Clarence Campbell to Albert Zettlemoyer: The Residence Office is in dire need of another staff member, and we would appreciate quick action on this request. The only necessary qualifications would be expertise in duplicate bridge, gin rummy, and crazy eights. He'll probably receive an associate to the assistantship immediately, with good opportunities for advançement to an assistant associateship.

Feb. 17/Brown and White: The Forum yesterday pushed through its resolution endorsing Sen. George McGovern for the 1972 Democratic nomination for president. The resolution had been buried in committee for three years. Tomorrow the Forum will begin to tackle the problem of Saturday classes.

Feb. 28/Brown and White: After being rejected in its bid for a role in the Board of Publications, the Forum has started its own newspaper. The first issue, which was to have consisted of several articles on Forum affairs, will be limited to one article by Paul Maco, spanning the entire eight pages. "I hated to cut it to that length," Maco said, "but my experience as a successful public speaker has taught me to be brief." He delivered a 30-minute address on the subject, but the snores of the listeners made it impossible to hear him after the first two sentences.

March 14/Letter — Charles Vihon to Brian Brockway: Please request Al Zettlemoyer to add an additional $10,000 to my grant. Frankly, Ruth is homesick for Bethlehem, and it would take at least that much to convince us to stay here. The weather's miserable.

April 29/Brown and White: Buildings and Grounds today completed repairs on the University snow plow, culminating five months of work. The repairs were often delayed by Lehigh's snow-covered roads, which prevented workers from getting on campus, but three weeks of warm weather have allowed them to finish. "Bring on the snow," beamed B. & G. chief Robert Numbers at the unveiling.

May 2/Brown and White: Irving Finkelstein, a Bethlehem dental assistant, has been chosen to deliver the 1974 Commencement address. His topic will be "Serendipity."

A cock has great influence on his own dunghill.

Seasons return, but not to me returns
Day, or the sweet approach of ev'n or morn,

Surrounds me, from the cheerful ways of men
Cut off, and for the book of knowledge fair
Presented with a universal blank
Of Nature's work to me expung'd and raz'd
And wisdom at one entrance quite shut out.

A generation of men is like a generation of leaves: the wind scatters some leaves upon the ground, while others the burgeoning wood brings forth — and the season of spring comes on. So of men one generation springs forth and another ceases.

1 One of the first of Lehigh's aspects to impress the newcomer is intimidating Packer Chapel, probably due to its seeming timelessness and the immediate implication of Lehigh being in the lofty Ivy Strata. But as deceptive as it is, it is capable of forwarning those who are open to its suggestions by means of its wise and looming presence.

3 Only the brainless forget the details of that first day. High school is many eons removed as you and your palpatations muster enough innocent confidence to tell the fossils to stay in the car while you fling yourself into Missimer's messengers' paws, only to find that there are alot of people that look like you inside milling about. And you, being the turk that you are, showed up as early as possible, only to find that now you
4 have to wait for your roomie to hit the scene. Penn Linen and Mary Mac have already set up shop, so you take care of them. But your mate-for-a-year is still lost. Ah! I'll get my books! You sly dog, you. And after discovering that its no treat toting those friggin' books up that hill that didn't seem bad at all from the backseat of pop's Caddy, you discover that your sure-fire pal still ain't here. Everything is in its place, so you'll wait him out to make sure he doesn't shift your clothes over to the crappy side of the closet. Eventually he shows: and your worst fears are confirmed: a March of Dimes refugee with terminal acne who looks like a cross between Felix the Cat and Willie the Whale. Later that day you find out that he also has chronic phthiriasis compounded by necrophagia in addition to a textbook case of halitosis. Says he's an E.E., too. Round one goes to Residence Halls, whoever they are. With that jerk around I can't slam no ham, so I'd better get
5 to work. And within a few days a seriousness overtakes you, the eighth time you here the word 'cum'. Maybe not in exactly these terms, but you soon realize that man can will nothing unless he has first understood that he can count on no one but himself; that he is alone, abandoned on earth in the midst of his infinite responsibilities, without help, with no other destiny than the one he forges for himself on this earth. — Sartre

6 The first attempts at merging; some found immediate success, some didn't try, laying in a cautious wait; others were repulsed by polar phenomenon, but all found varying degrees of disappointment due to an omnipresent black border of immovability, of a disturbingly unknown source. There is no
8 cosmic vision that makes the graduate student spin out answers in out-of-the-blue images and alien symbols, in the manner of an Einstein or a Dirac. The mentality is that of an engineer: grab a problem, inhale its every detail, and grind it into submission with twenty-hour days and brown bag lunches. — Sat. Rev. of the Sci. Initial diligence by imitation of the grad turks quickly pays off, but at 7:15 A.M. one wonders
9 whether he should enter the realm of total or even partial committment. Its tempting though: one simple goal, good results, too, for as Dryden knew, there is a pleasure in being 10 mad which none but madmen know. Besides, look at these guys; they're Great. Boy, oh boy, if I knew one-tenth of what 12 they know . . . Maybe I'll do it. But thanks to in-the-nick-of-time distractions, Joe Bag-of-Donuts doesn't. Providing constant reminders that there exist other conceivable areas of interest, liberated Betty Boops, or as Big Al calls 'em, Engineerettes, are a distracting must for the tuned eye as they gracefully strewn lower campus, spreading cheer and funky smells to those who qualify for the lofty honor of a smile or a touch on the arm by well machined digits. As even wise old Linderman attests to.

14 Against boredom even the gods struggle in vain, Nietzsche tells us, as Sir Issac Newton concurs with his second law of human nature: Every body continues in its state of rest, or of uniform motion in a right line, unless it is compelled to change that state by forces impressed upon it; most faculty are familiar enough with this law to use it in their every course while others still deny its validity.

17 The spaceship Dravo caught in a rare moment of repose during an unscheduled disciplinary landing.

18 Certainly the most theraputic aspect of Lehigh's world famous intramural program is its massive offering of stage time to potential Master Thespians who just never had the chance.

19 Asymetry with coordination is the key to any photograph of worth. However symetry violations in sport are often the downfall of many a coordinated team, the demise being less severe if the potential had never appeared.

20 Such was the case as the soccer team royally blew the championship against Bucknell; as the wearied unsuccessfuls reassembled for a final comforting of souls, at least one was unable to repress the futility of his efforts — possibly on both sides of the mountain.

21 But for others, the future looks bright.

22 Saucon Valley was tidied up, the Campus Police were foiled and befuddled once again, and that $16,000 education was aptly put to use as Asa Packer's nation prepared itself for the usual ridiculosities of Alumni Weekend. The only interesting product of the entire affair was a front page quote in the Bethlehem Globe-Times from Police Chieftain Donchez who described the attack on the steeples by Taylor Hall as "unfair and downright unkind", noting that the assault must have taken place during the night shift's nap period, behind the Physics building.

24 It's uncanny. All participating factions of the nation know exactly what to do, when to do it, and even how to, without even a scent of a memo from the Registrar or Residence Halls. Down to every last person, it's just uncanny.

25 The seeming concern over futbaw muscle-man Jimmy Case is well warranted due to the painful extraction of water and some associated goo-goos from his forehead with a hypermic so big that it had to be safaried in from the Hell Center by three turbanned O.E.A. rejects chanting "Bwana gotta play". After the draining session, he justs plays on, as 27 does the band as the team forgets to run through its pretty human hall of homage for the 14th time in a row.

28 If your playing, any spectator is intimidating. But like players, they can be ranked: here peer pressure is the weakest, with Mr. Fabricmill's dream walking a close, impotent second. But the third is to be feared and dreaded, for the Olympian is a difficult foe to oppose, since they've got the bongo-bucks that may or may not let you finish, depending.

30 Never buy a Vivitar, buy a Nikkor.

32 Sint, spent, and silent, defensive madman Larry Warren helplessly watches his counterparts stymie his comrades as a powerful Penn wreaks havoc on the Engineer's prided offense. It was at night, though, which was unfair, so no countsies.

33 Piqued, pining, and pissed that he woke up in the middle of another thrill packed Waterhole Lecture, Isadore Isolation politely ponders the prolixity of pallid platituder Paul Franz pedagogically professing the 'propriateness of Paleolithic payments, principles, and profits, while additionally purposely pontificating upon his personal pandering and progressive pride. Isadore and Larry are boatmates.

34 So you begin to realize you're in a little trouble when you start hallucinating in mid-morning, when even the open areas are somehow closed, and when these thoughts don't dissipate like they used to. Inanimate shapes begin to talk to you, and furthermore, worse, their relationships to each other seem to symbolize relationships in your life; I'm definitely gonna get some sleep tonight.

38 But it doesn't help. So you wander down to Pep Boys to buy a #2 grip. Not much good, though, as strange turns to bizarre, which is now normal, so it's O.K.

39 Some disagree.

40 God surely planned the pattern: Each thread, the dark and the fair, Is chosen by his Master skill, And placed in the web with care. — Unknown. Burdened with the responsibility of the self, its tonnage, bending, yet stiff, cold, stark — those good ol' days.

42 Sometimes the only thing that greets you besides the funky wake of a passing marbelette, is a season. If that is the case, get a #3.

44 Culture comes to Derivativeville as Arthur Tweedler and the Engineer Bops Orchestra do their thing while vocal Czar Benji Cutler toys with the angelic boxes of visiting Smithies who came down expecting to see what frats were like. And it wasn't because of the snowplow.

46 The Businessman, and Co. toil over some U.C. think drink as others nearby think of drink and their dink.

48 To think is to teach; to learn is to be taught to think by a thinker; but to train is to lift weights and run, and training is for dogs.

Whatever be the detail with which you cram your student, the chance of his meeting in after-life life exactly that detail is almost infinitesimal; and if he does meet it, he will probably have forgotten what you taught him about it. The really useful training yields a comprehension of a few general principles with a thorough grounding in the way they apply to a variety of concrete details. In subsequent practice the men will have forgotten your particular details; but they will remember by an unconscious common sense how to apply principles to immediate circumstances. — Alfred North Whitehead

50 Our religion is no different from any other. It too has different and various forms, but what counts is that your devout. We have, for instance, a certain idolatry of grades, those five holy letters that reach from above to twist and shape your very destiny. In the chapel and at home, on the wood and metal desks of the altars, you make the sacrifices of time, work, sleep, and all the other things necessary to placate this angry god. A religion, perhaps not too lasting, but what matters is if your devout. — Alec Meiklejohn

54 Dwellers by the sea cannot fail to be impressed by the sight of its ceaseless ebb and flow, and are apt, on the principles of that rude philosophy of sympathy and resemblance . . . to trace a subtle relation, a secret harmony, between its tides and the tides of man, — Sir James Frazer. Those damn shapes reappear but this time with more significance since now your convinced that they are not merely random patterns, but sentences which begin to form paragraphs which begin to form a theme which begins to form a sole idea which is not so nice.

56 Ideas shattered, ideals lost, pathways obscured by physical and mental fog, the whole conspires in an unnerving convergence upon him who deserves this not.

59 In intensive training for Nationals, Player-Coach Thad Turner displays one of his favorite moves. This is but one of his many successful mat-side take-downs which carried him all the way to Iowa and the discerning eye of ABC's Jim McKay, who queried, "What could possibly make grown men act like this?", referring specifically to an instant replay of Terrible Thad shooting for a fine double leg on a local chair.

60 Returning veteran grappler Greg Karabin had his man cradled when his inopportune roll was cashed in on as cradling positions reversed for a quick pin against Lehigh. Glenn Grant's only problem was that he had lent the Duker his Foster Grants, i.e. they were broken during the previous pin.

61 You have to feel sort of sorry for the poor bloke who has to wrestle Sculley because of that ungodly icy methodology, which is as irremovable as the zits on Mohler's kids.

62 There were three ominous meetings of Frick and Fritz this season, this last one being the most devastating since Fritz had to pull out a confused referee's decision late Saturday morning in order to meet a fresh Frick in the early afternoon. Even though the usual quickness, power, and awesome concentration were present, the Big Apple was also, and it dominated.

63 Friday evening, after semifinals at Nationals.

78 No question. — Nikkor.

80 The excerpts listed are from Journalism Ace Bill White's latest book, "The Lehigh Papers". Months of black turtlenecks, Foster Grants, and glued lips were culminated on August 15, 1974 at 4:34 A.M., when one weary William banged out the last period of the manuscript, which totals out to 3,853 pages. "Whew", remarked Big Bill with his usual innovative wit and eloquence, as he collapsed over his smouldering typewriter. His on-looking and proud mother noted that "he deserves the rest", explaining that little Billie had pulled an all-monther in order to wrap up the project. Such was the single minded dedication throughout the academic year as wheeling-dealing Les Whitten, Jr. relentlessly scraped and raped any and all for these priceless documents. The completed 1974 edition may, of course, be purchased in the bookstore for $132.95 with a validated F'74 I.D. card.

90 The ending, speeding past as quickly as the rest did, and the first decision in four or twenty-one years, depending, proves to be traumatic for all but the set few who knew from page 3 that they would sign with daddy and would someday drive a 1992 Fleetwood, with which they would register their wide-eyed offspring.

Yearbook Theory

Part I

So you want to work on the yearbook, huh? What position would you like? Liberated Libra? Tantalizing Taurus? Or maybe you would prefer the less painful but still innovative Capricorn. Whatever you choose, please plan on getting screwed. This is, of course, not to say that yearbooking guarantees you getting your rocks off all over some layout editor's face, or even to insinuate that the meetings invariably conclude with a group grope in which you are able to release all those academic tensions through your seminal canal. Ney. It is to say that if you join the yearbook staff your in for a pantload of work. Work which eludes a very accurate description other than being just work work. Like the homework assignments for crotchety ol' Prof. Stillborn whose wife had left him this semester because he had gotten a new cat-of-nine tails which really hurt so that now it's up the old anal with you guys; or how about that asshole of a grad student that you had for E.R. 233, who was determined to restore the Lehigh of the sixties from which he is a miscarried remnant, so he demands that your recitation do an additional 7 book reports for him and for Lehigh. Work work is a bite. Simple.

You're in the impeding reading room of Linderman, thinking, Jesus, how the hell am I going to get all this jazz done? Jesus, you remark as you lean forward reluctantly reaching for that insipidly indifferent book with which you are forced to intercourse. Christ, there must be an easier way, there must be, . . . but, as you have known all along, there really isn't.

Same goes for the yearbook. With two compounding factors. When you think about it, there aren't a whole lot of things more ridiculous than a yearbook. An annual. A crass volume of short term and long term Nostalgia. What could be more ridiculous than sitting around reminiscing about those good ol' days? In the back of just about everyone's mind is a holding of the utter triviality of a yearbook, regarding it at best as a semi-necessary publication which other people enjoy more than yourself. Christ, no one would dare date you if word got out you enjoyed thumbing through an idiotic yearbook. It is this attitude which diminishes the significance of the work and makes the effort that much more difficult. The second impediment is the type of work to be performed: it sucks. God, does it suck, from the first day when you think that this preliminary crap will soon be over and the real creativity can be tackled with all your genius and ingenuity and enthusiasm which you had when you signed up for the thing. Well, Bidét, swallow real hard because you're real wrong. Somehow, it's really uncanny, the tasks trickle down from the top and they just don't seem to stop sucking. Maybe it was the indelicate manner in which you kneed the associate editor when he tried to ram his hand up your unusually appealing dress, maybe it's your dog breath, or maybe it's the remote possibility of you being a completely incompetent douche bag, but in any case the work just won't quit sucking and maybe you can quit pretty soon.

Then comes that painful day when you see that the editor also is besieged by crap work, the only difference being that he has more of it than you do. Whew, I thought I was the only one around here with shitful jobs, you think, suddenly realizing that, Christ, if the EDITOR doesn't have all the good jobs, then . . . Christ, who the hell DOES? Is it that asshole of a photoeditor, I never see him turking on this garbage, layout editor maybe? What goes here . . .?

Then comes deadline time; it really doesn't matter whether you only have one at June 1st or whether the first of your stupid copy is due on Dec. 11th, you're gonna miss it either way. Or at best it's gonna be tight. A Psychiatrist's paradise, that's what that mephetic pit is you call an office is at deadline time. It is very simply a trauma the likes of which few expect and fewer can handle: staff members and editors alike fold like one-legged Green Stamp tables, while their work unevenly heaps up on the collective shit-cake. God, how the hell will this crap. . . . And it's just about this time that the editor calmly suggests that all remaining staff members begin attending chapel services regularly, begin taking their religion seriously, like your pop would, and also recommends that you wrap up your immediate academic commitments because soon the shit will calmly hit the fan and there really won't be much time for other things. He suggests this, calmly no less.

24 hours later you find yourself in a dilemma meeting; it seems like a skit of the White House's Watergate cover up meetings in which the remaining pros sat around in a disturbingly quiet room uneasily shifting their weight back and forth while trying to remain calm as they discussed various aspects of the approaching tidal wave and how their doomed pier was going to react. It is during this deliberation that each wave rider suddenly realizes that he is about to be wiped out by a blast which allows no survivors. Perhaps this angry god may be placated by the reasonable sacrifice of two all-nighters. Maybe I can get my roomy to help somewhat. Desperate thoughts for desperate men. Which as it turns out is not nearly as desperate as you should have been at that desperation meeting.

The U.S. Coast Guard and the editor were wrong. It's here already. The 16 hour days turn into unexpected all nighters and the all nighters turned out to be bunched right together, and at 3:46 A.M. you, as well as everybody else, realize that firstly, the work finished so far resembles the first one inch diameter turdball of a guy who's been constipated for 8 days and he had to strain for the one incher, secondly that you have some how drunk so much coffee that your genitals have shrunk to the size of a nine year old's who spent the day in an overly chlorinated pool, and thirdly, what your doing is real stupid, I mean, Christ, if I were a brilliant grad student and the world was hanging on my every equation, maybe I could keep working, but THIS shit, Christ, I'm bagging it. See you assholes later,

And so it goes, for as long as it takes to get it done, and sure enough, after setting and resetting endurance records which would have sent Edison heading for the switch, the end slowly curves into view and after a few more 48 hour stretches, which now do not appear as blatent assaults on your nervous system but the norm, the invisible end pops up right in front of you and says hello you dripping orafice, feel neat? God, are you stupid, and then vaporizes right there in front of you. No bands. No corks. Not even mommy to tell you that you did a great job and should be proud of it. No one. Alone, exhausted, poisoned by an ungodly combination of Maxim and a dirty immersion coil, everyone dissipates, with a remnant grimness which can't be shaken, knowing that somewhere in there are stupid mistakes, reluctant compromises, total abortions, and alot of stupidity which some day will appear as mildly humorous but presently seems pretty regrettable.

What is Time?

For Lehigh Football, four years has meant the transition from mediocrity to National contenders. It has meant the development of the best Division II passing game in the country. It has meant the building of a consistently tough defense to go along with the explosive offense. Finally, it has meant gaining a share of the Lambert Cup, along with traditional power Delaware, as the East's best Small College team.

The story of the Lehigh Football transition can be measured by the performance of Kim McQuilken, who broke all of the University's passing records. During the 1973 season, he led the entire Nation in this department. McQuilken's reward was being selected as the second draft pick of the NFL Atlanta Falcons. His favorite target was tight end Bill Schlegel, who set a new receiving mark at Lehigh, and was drafted by the new World Football League.

While led by offensive stars McQuilken, Schlegel, and Freshman sensation Rod Gardner, the Lehigh success story was a complete team effort. A strong offensive line as well as some new defensive formations were instrumental in producing this successful season. As a result of this success, recruiting should be bolstered leading to much gridiron success in the bright future.

CROSS COUNTRY

The glamour in witnessing a long distance run probably appeals to only the strong of heart and limb. In fact, a decided majority of university students have never viewed this test of man versus terrain. Though they live in the shadow of football and soccer, and receive but a fraction of the ink that they deserve, one must truly admire the efforts of the Cross Country team and their mentor, John Covert. Their success in competition in the past years has surpassed that of every other sport.

1973 proved to be no exception to the rule. Although occasionally down they were never out. The team came from behind to capture a share of the MAC title. However the Cross Country team did relinquish their hold of the IC4A crown by finishing fourth behind Bucknell.

Some good underclassmen bolster Lehigh's hopes for the bright future.

The best laid plans of all men often go array; and so it held true for the University's booters. One nemesis lay between them and glory. One game lay between them and fame . . . but it was not to be. On the last game of the season, the team dropped a tough 3-0 decision to the Bisons of Bucknell, depriving the Engineers of a Conference Championship.

A rough season in that respect, but a fine improvement reversing the previous year's 5-8 record. Memorable wins against Lafayette, Muhlenberg, and LaSalle along with a superbly played 1-0 setback to number ten ranked Hartwick, added to the excitement of the season.

"Great Expectations" says the banner for Lehigh's bright future in Soccer.

BASKETBALL

How does one describe the '73–'74 basketball season?

Imagine yourself walking through a tunnel. With each succeeding step it gets bleaker and bleaker. Just as you are about to give up hope a faint glimmer of light appears around the final turn.

Such was the case of the Lehigh Basketball team as three late season victories were the only spark of light in an otherwise dark year. Norm Liedtke was the only senior remaining from an outstanding freshman team. Thus the '73–'74 squad was highly inexperienced, and at times turnovers were more common than baskets. The result was a new school record for consecutive losses before the team was able to put together a strong effort to win a game against Muhlenberg in their sixteenth attempt. Ultimately the remainder of the season was dedicated to giving experience to many freshmen who hope to bring Lehigh basketball back to respectability.

The highlight of the year came in a thrilling overtime victory over arch rival Lafayette in the last home game of the season. This late season spark should yield a brighter picture in years to come as the current players gain more experience and are aided by additional bright recruits.

LEHIGH

A team of superlatives; the winningest, the losingest, and an individual who was the best.

While undertaking the longest, and possibly the most challenging schedule in University history, the grapplers were able to retain their string of consecutive winning seasons. The team was often within one move of achieving the "BIG" victory which would have made for a truly sensational season. Tough setbacks at the hands of Oregon State, Cal Poly, and Penn State were symbolic of their frustrations.

However, this is not meant to set a disheartening note regarding this past season, as for the first time in four years Lehigh was able to crack into the Nation's top ten. The reason for this high finish was greatly due to the efforts of Tom Sculley, who proved himself to be the best in the country in the 134 pound weight class. The National crown was a fitting climax to an undefeated campaign which saw him set a new school record for victories by an individual in one season.

Although the shoes of Tom Sculley will be hard to fill, the future of Lehigh Wrestling still appears bright as all other National point scorers will return next season.

HOCKEY

New Coach, Don "Toots" Cahoon, along with an increase in practice time were major factors that helped to produce Lehigh's best Hockey team in recent years. The young Engineer squad captured the MAC Championship and were within one victory of consideration for a post season tournament invitation.

The future for Lehigh Hockey appears to be very bright, and only the lack of a skating facility on or near campus might keep hockey from becoming one of Lehigh's most popular overall sports.

RIFLE

Many times a high degree of success is taken for granted. One just naturally expects that such success will continue forever. Thus a just recognition is often not forthcoming.

Similarly the phenomenal success of the rifle team is very often overshadowed by the "glamour" sports at Lehigh. However, it is the rifle team which is one of the University's most superior squads. This year's team proved to be no exception as they compiled a fine 6-1 record in their conference dropping only a close decision to Kings Point. Year in and year out the rifle team is a constant winner, perhaps the most constant of all the athletic teams. Sgt.-Major Kress deserves a great deal of credit for his consistent ability to elicit the most from his shooters. With captain Ken Miller and other riflemen returning Lehigh's future continues to look bright.

It's time the student body showed that they appreciate the efforts of this fine squad. Yeah.

MAC Championship 8th

Final Record 5-6-0

Bob Roth's performance in the 200 yard breast stroke in the 1974 Middle Atlantic Conference meet might have won a championship in 1973. However this year it simply brought him a fifth place finish. This fact is symbolic of the Lehigh University Swimming team's inability to keep up with the improvement of their opponents.

The Mermen were led to a dismal 8th place finish in the conference tournament where in past years they usually contended for the championship. Coach Gardner's explanation for Lehigh's fall was that the Swimming team recruits on a small college level but is forced to compete against major college teams. The only optimism comes from the fact that all but two members of this year's team will return and hopefully will show some improvement. So the future does look bright.

TENNIS

Once again the burden of capturing the All-Sports trophy fell on the shoulders of the Tennis Team, and as last year, the engineer netmen were up to the task with a smashing 7-2 triumph over arch-rival Lafayette which enabled the university to retain the coveted trophy.

After dropping tough decisions at the outset of the season, the raqueteers finished strong capturing six out of the last seven matches. Since the squad contained nine freshman who gained valuable experience, the future for this team should be extremely bright.

It is most difficult to get a hit if one starts with two strikes against him. Similarly, it is difficult to have a sensational record when one starts a season by dropping its first six games. This is the case with the university baseball team, as they suffered through a disastrous early season against inferior competition during their annual Southern trip. They did rebound, however, to salvage a fair record by winning eleven of their next eighteen, highlighted by a 13–12 victory over Lafayette.

Many bright spots appeared for Coach Schultz, most notably, the pitching of Stan Sterner, who tied the school record for victories in a season. Numerous other "heroes" aided the engineer cause, but the over-all success or failure of the squad was a team effort. More important than the team record indicates, is the valuable experience obtained by some of the rookies. Like many of the Lehigh athletic teams, the spotlight was on youth, which should lead to bright things in the future.

The 1973 Lacrosse team was perhaps the best in the University's history. How could they possibly follow this act . . . the answer is, THEY COULDN'T. And the future looks pretty crummy.

For years the Lehigh University relay team entered the Penn relays and inevitably returned empty handed, but this was not to be in 1974 as the Medley relay team captured a 4th place finish and in a qualifying round set a new University record. Also the 2-mile relay team finished 8th in the same tournament.

Two second place finishes, one by Mike Greene and one by Freshman Stellan Thoren, were the best the engineers could muster in the MAC tournament due to scheduling conflicts with final examinations.

With the team sporting several members from various foreign lands the future looks bright for the University Tracksters and Fieldmen.

GOLF

Despite the loss of several key personnel Coach Roy Heckman's Golf team was able to conclude their season with a fine 10-6 record including an exciting 413-418 victory over Colgate. At the beginning of the season it appeared that the linksmen would be in for a hard time, but the maturing squad captured 7 out of their last 8 matches and finished very strongly.

Although finishing only 7th in the MAC tournament and 10th at Easterns the strong late showing of the young engineer golfers promises a bright future for the Lehigh Golf team.

With the advent of coeducation at Lehigh, females have become an integral part of all facets of campus life. This is particularly false on the athletic field, where women now compete in three inter-collegiate sports in addition to the powder-puff football game. Under the guidance of Coach Helen Bond, the engineerettes also participated in field hockey, swimming, and tennis. And, of course, the future looks real funky.

M&M A-3

A lady, that is an enlightened, cultivated, liberal lady — the only kind to be in a time of increasing classlessness — could espouse any cause: wayward girls, social diseases, unmarried mothers, and/or birth control with impunity. But never by so much as the shadow of a look should she acknowledge her own experience with the Facts of Life.

Minus the Old Guard, the Brothers United returned with Doobies in their hearts and soccer in their feet, but Schmilson stole the show. Squati and the team of Breslin and Sewell competed for the Bullet Memorial Disconfiguration Award. Joster's room was too hot, so BC air conditioned the executive suite. Everyone prayed for relief as the Triple A took a trip. A December wedding turned into a divorce as JG took the "ette" from ball. Boston returned to hear the bells ring, as Bridsie got a hand from Dennis in the eaves. But later SSC saved the dignity of Massachusetts. Villa asked for Persian oil in Madrid, Satan wanted a high school thrill, but Salty got the red bone. Rosies inherited your mother's bloomers, but nobody wanted them. A new Lucy found an old room (just like it was when) and a first in the bed race. Ed had a phone call, but he was busy on the other line. The B taught the pledges how the arms form a "Chi," but they couldn't stay to practice. Who knows how to answer the phone, anyway?

Good Night, Chi Phi!

CANINES AWARDED DEGREES IN COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES
by Chuck U. Farley

BETHLEHEM — The Bachelor of Arts degree was conferred upon two male dogs yesterday in commencement exercises held at Lehigh University's Taylor Stadium.

The move set a world wide precedent and was considered a major step forward for the Canine Liberation Movement.

The two dogs, Snowball and Beanbag, were accepted as freshmen in 1970 in an attempt by the University administration to cultivate a wider cross-section in the student body. A year later, in 1971, the University opened its doors to women.

The commencement closed the books on a brilliant college career for the dogs.

Snowball, an English major, was a four-year member of the cross country team, served on the Forum's Committee on Operations and Procedures, was SAC concert chairman, and was a brother of Sigma Chi fraternity.

Beanbag was also a Sigma Chi. In addition, he served as program director of WLRN, was a lighting technician for Mustard and Cheese, and was the manager of the girls' field hockey team. This past winter, he tried out for varsity basketball just for chuckles, became a starter, and captured Rookie of the Year and MVP honors.

Both dogs maintained an average of over 3.4 during their entire stay at Lehigh. Unfortunately, their fine scholastic achievements weren't enough to keep Sigma Chi from being placed on academic probation.

When asked what they thought of the rigors of college life, they both replied, "Rough!"

Snowball plans to hitchhike cross country before going to work in September as a writer for National Lampoon.

Beanbag, a speech major, hasn't found a job yet. He plans to spend his summer chasing cars and motorcycles down Route 22.

Some men are graduated from college cum laude, some are graduated summa cum laude, and some are graduated mirabile dictu.

GROUND BROKEN FOR $7,000,000 CHEMISTRY COMPLEX INCLUDES 7-STORY SEELEY G. MUDD BUILDING

Ground was officially broken at a special ceremony in April for Lehigh's $7,000,000 Chemistry Complex, which will include the 7-story Seeley G. Mudd Building.

The Seeley G. Mudd Fund, Los Angeles, made a major contribution for the chemistry tower through the University's current 10-year $67-million "New Century Fund," a nationwide development campaign launched two years ago.

In his speech to those assembled, Harold S. Mohler, chairman of the Lehigh Board of Trustees, paid highest tribute to the foundations that "were established by thoughtful and generous people to help their fellow men . . . and . . . foundations like the Seeley G. Mudd Fund are a precious and necessary part of private institutions."

Mr. Franklin, speaking in behalf of the Fund, said, "Dr. Mudd's will provides that each college to which a grant is made shall be a leading institution. Our presence here indicates that Lehigh is indeed a leading University."

Take Army ROTC. Get tons of responsibility.

It's your first year out of college. You've got a good job in a big company...one with assets of around thirty million dollars. And you're not just working for this company, you're helping to run it. You're responsible for its success or failure.

That's one of the best things about taking Army ROTC in college...the time you spend after college, serving as an officer in the active Army or in a Reserve component. You'll get the kind of responsibility and leadership experience that some people work years to earn. Responsibility. We've got tons of it.

Army ROTC. The more you look at it, the better it looks.

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times."
Charles Dickens

Nude pictures in the Brown and White; Deming Lewis' head on Eli Schwartz' "body"; gas lines around the block; Richard Nixon practicing candor; school opening in an August heatwave; Kim McQuilken chucking winners; Tom Sculley baffling opponents. These and other images flash across the mind when contemplating academic year 1973-74.

In China it was the year of the Tiger, but in America it was the year of the Ass. An incredibly stupid burglary had provided the thread which reporters used to "unravel an administration." From a sweeping victory in 1972, President Nixon's popularity had plunged by 1973-74 to a low of 25%. Investigating committees and special prosecutors dominated the land and ordinary folk soon lost track of which high official was indicted, convicted or simply back at the ranch erasing tapes. The public was inundated by legal terms and practices. Copping a plea, plea bargaining, executive privilege, impeachment procedures came tripping off the tongue of every news buff. Ironically, the old cliches such as law and order became the object of sneers and guffaws. The great thunderer against the media, permissiveness and effete snobs, Spiro Agnew, was caught with both hands and feet in the money-trough and resigned to avoid a jail sentence. But so thick and fast did further revelations fall upon benumbed heads that in no time at all Mr. Agnew's disgrace was all but driven from our minds. At last report Mr. Agnew, with the aid of powerful friends, especially the erstwhile Democrat and crooner Mr. Sinatra, was pulling his fortunes together and ready to make a go of it once more in this land of opportunity.

Similarily, another of the law and order men, Mr. John Mitchell, sometime Attorney-General, stood accused, among other things, of interfering with an SEC investigation of Mr. Vesco. Perhaps radicals, blacks and the parents of the Kent State students could be excused a chortle or two about the turn of events.

From its center in Judge Sirica's court, to Sam Erwin's Senate Committee the ripples kept spreading or to change the metaphor to one popular a decade ago, the dominoes kept falling. Senator Erwin, eyebrows ajumpin', quoted the Bible, the Constitution and Aunt Jemima as he excoriated the myriad dirty tricks, cover-ups and downright villainy of those in and around the President. Strange noises and things that go bump in the night turned out to be the special secret service of the White House affectionately known as the "plumbers." Led by James Bond types, Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt, these heroes of our electronic age made burglary a favorite advocation of the Nixon years. Before they bungled Watergate, they had evidently gone as far as burglarizing Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office. This interference with the rights of the man of Pentagon Papers fame was compounded by Administration pressure on the presiding judge. And thus the case was tossed out, but again soon overwhelmed or lost in the multiplicity of exposes and scandals. No institution seemed free from taint. The FBI and its directors L. Patrick Gray were left to "twist slowly, slowly in the wind"; the CIA seemed oddly involved in the burglaries; and the White House after reluctantly supplying tapes subpoened originally by Cox, he of the Saturday Night Massacre, found some missing and others partially erased. Woe to future students of history at Lehigh. Who will ever be able to fathom or remember the cabinet officers, aides and hangers-on who populated the Washington scene in these years of moral decline? Whatever be the final outcome of the impeachment process it is certainly true that this has not been a good year for the prestige of the Presidency. Perhaps as some say it is the end of the "runaway" Presidency, but only time will tell us the gains and losses of the Watergate fiasco.

The student of 1973–74 witnessed not only an extraordinary political scene, but a crises in the basic assumptions of our industrial society. On top of a galloping inflation, came a sharp shortage of oil, at least partially caused by renewed fighting in the Middle East and a subsequent Arab boycott. For a few short months the gas shortage threw America into panic. People fought at the pumps, attendants carried pistols, and it became clear that the automobile is truly first in hearts of Americans. As prices rose and the boycott was ended, gas flowed once more leaving many to wonder if the experience was a real foretaste of coming shortages or an example of market manipulation.

The academic year in which this all came to pass began in an August heat wave, certainly an ominous beginning. Little had those of us who had supported the Forum in the Spring of 1970 guessed we had spawned a Frankenstein that would send us dripping to class in August. The Forum itself seemed to be wilting not from the weather but from its cumbrous machinery and loss of student-faculty elan. Originally lauded as Lehigh's "sane" solution to campus strife, by 1973–74 the Forum was more moribund than sane. Nomination committees wheedled and cajoled faculty members to run for the Forum. Student candidates were so few in number that the vast majority were guaranteed election. Many believed the Forum ineffective and a handy lightening-rod for the Administration. As the Forum teetered and groaned its way through the year, a few flashes of interest were generated by the Forum over Dr. Ottervik's appointment to a Vice-Presidency. After a rump committee of the Forum had "approved" the appointment, a groundswell of opposition both to the Administration's method of operation and to the creation of another Vice-President caused reconsideration by a more properly constituted Forum committee. Here the Brown and White became the Washington Post of the Lehigh Valley. Coming across, by the mysterious means known only to newspaper men, a copy of the committee's secret report, the Brown and White promptly printed same, a tactic which also allowed the paper to come out solidly for the Administration and against old fogy professors. An investigation into this "leak" (some call it a plant) uncovered nothing of interest.

Of greatest import to the Arts student was the final termination of that seemingly endless struggle over the foreign-language requirements. Defeated two years ago, the proposition to drop the requirement, surfaced once more imbedded this time in a revision of distribution requirements. After a first Arts College meeting, aptly described by Bob Goldich as a Marx Brothers comedy, a second meeting was held to determine what happened in the first meeting. With their usual skill and tact, the proponents of the new requirements won the day and the bane of thousands of aspiring scholars was wiped from the face of the curriculum. The struggle at the University level proved anti-climatic and a new distribution and counseling pattern was established in the Arts College.

Aside from these events, campus life in 1973–74 was qualitatively different from the late 60's and early 70's. Where radical students had held Vietnam protests, university-wide strikes, sit-ins and other manifestations of protest, now scrambled a new phenomenon the "streaker"! Clad, sometimes in sneakers and ties, nude males (and some females) dashed hither, thither and yon around the campus and its environs. All of this, which a decade ago would have brought stern disapproval was looked upon benignly by practically one and all. After all, as more than one faculty member intoned, it was better than burning buildings. A learned psychiatrist conjectured that America's youth was telling Nixon to let it all hang out. An image that boggles the mind. Since the streaking craze coincided with the wrestling tournament readers of the Brown and White were treated to an issue filled not only with cradles and cross-body rides but genitalia of various sizes and shapes. Despite some protests from those not in the forefront of the sexual revolution, students and Faculty felt, in the words of one of the former, that Dean Quay "handled the streakers well."

But lest the future reader think that all was fun and gaiety at Lehigh, it should be recorded that Lehigh was in touch with matters of greater significance. Sam Dash, chief counsel to the Senate Watergate Committee, enthralled a large audience with his recounting of the complex investigation of the German Mafia. Following his public talk, Mr. Dash regaled students and faculty with thoughts and ideas concerning political life in these United States. Other prominent political figures to be featured on campus were Senator William Proxmire and the Senatorial hopefuls, Dennenberg and Flaherty.

Despite these intersections with the larger body politic, campuses remained quiet. The ending, at least for our troops, of the Vietnam War and the draft and the rise of what is being called a new vocationalism signaled the end of the recent wave of activism. Conservative professors at last found some hope for academe although some noted that the replacement of activism with vocationalism was hardly an improvement. Whatever be the reasons for the resurrection of the 1950's, it is obvious that the national scene did little to restore student confidence in his society or to remove a pervasive cynicism. Perhaps the young are always cynical, but seldom has there been more objective reasons for despair.

Prof. Joseph Dowling

Sam Dash displaying all the tact and diplomacy which distinguished him from other hostiles

The founding fathers, having participated in the struggle against arbitrary power, comprehended some eternal truths respecting men and government. They knew that those entrusted with power are susceptible to the disease of tyrants, which George Washington rightly describes as "love of power and the proneness to abuse it." For that reason, they realized that the power of public officers should be defined by laws which they, as well as the people, are obligated to obey; a truth enunciated by Daniel Webster when he said that "whatever government is not a government of laws is a despotism, let it be called what it may."

Senator Sam Ervin

Alexis de Tocqueville in 1835, after observing the operation of American democracy, wrote that the press, despite its penchant for abuse, should not be restrained. "There is no medium", he said, "between servitude and license; in order to enjoy the inestimable benefits that the liberty of the press ensures, it is necessary to submit to the inevitable evils that it creates."

This is an eloquent and wise statement. You either have a free press or you don't. There is no middle ground — no room for qualification and no room for an officially sanctioned version of the truth.

Senator Sam Ervin

COLOPHON

The 1974 Epitome was printed by Western Publishing Co. at their Cambridge, Md. plant. The stock used was 80 lb. Warren Cameo Gloss, which we felt was the most printable surface and weight. The Photo Essay and the Administration sections were spot varnished and run with a special duotone process which consisted of printing the top 60% of each print with a 300 line screen with the lower 40% being taken care of by the usual 150 line screen, which in part accounts for the strong blacks and delicate highs rendered. The majority of the prints were done by Asman's Custom Photo Service, located at 926 Penn. Ave. S.E., Washington, D.C. The remaining prints were by the editor. Nikon equipment was used exclusively with the exception of the senior portraits which Merin Studios shot on a larger, portrait rig, which is necessary for the demanding specs that both he and we assumed. All film was processed by Asman's using inspection during development and a suitable grade of Azo for contacting. The prints were on Kodabromide and Velour Black, although Agfa #6 was occasionally needed for some real cuties. Tri-X rated normally was the usual choice with 1200 being only dirā necessitās; Plus-X rated normally was used on some of the groups. Very rarely were prints enlarged over 120% or reduced past 70% by the publisher since at those approximate limits there is a unavoidable and detectable shift of the tones.

Here is the place for special thanks, which you may skip if you don't see your name listed. Fran Peterson provided excellent, patient service and sound advise in servicing our account while his brother Carl was indispensable to the renovation of Western's image and our peace of mind. Tom Schuerman, Bill Walker, and Dave Pagnard were the pros who made an editor happy that he was working with top notch personel and not just guys who sort of did it for a living; intelligent and conscientious service by them left little doubt in our minds that there is but one choice as to publishers. Jim Benjamin also provided tremendous technical and aesthetic advice as to the Photo Essay, as did Bob Christiansen. The type used was Palatino with the copy in 10 point and most of the captions in 8 point. The cover was made by Smith Craft with Dom Granziano as the particular tailor.

Asman's is incredible. Simple as that. They are the complete custom service which you never really find the limits of. Eight or nine guys work there in a little Green townhouse which is now further diminished in perspective by a huge Metro construction sight in front, with the only clue to the house's interior being a small engraved sign mounted in the center of the front door. You walk in and immediately faint because there on the walls of the first little room you enter are some of the most incredible mounted prints your ignorant eyes have ever beheld. You proceed somehow, gasping, into a similarly coated room where Walt or Skip are working, whereupon seeing you, greet you with a comforting smile which restores you to your initial sobriety. And as one of them saunters towards you you know that you ain't messing with the kids no more; every single object in the room radiates professionalism except you because your drooling again. Upon a quick inspection of their price list, you wet your pants. How can these guys produce stuff like this for prices like these, you ask as the price list drops from your hand and you resume your initial stupor, complete with four-point stars in the eyes and a heart that says you're in orgasm. Very simply stated, they do not make mistakes. Maybe a speck of dust now and then which they automatically touch out, maybe a different interpretation of a negative than you had in mind but that's only because your an idiot and didn't mark the sheet with the exact specs.

We would have been dead without them. Asman himself was a darkroom technician for Life for 18 years or so. When they decided they wanted him in New York City he said no and started a legend with a few other classic craftsmen who were driven only by their pride. AP, UPI, other biggies have need for their art occasionally, as their displayed work attests to. Western can do a job and a half, but they are still limited by the prints submitted. Therefore, if there is a reason for the consistancy throughout this ridiculous volume, it is because the standards set by Asman, Western and myself have somehow meshed in a perfect and propelling harmony, with cords sweet enough to choke a realist.

This section is dedicated to the dedication of the book, which I long ago dedicated to a dedicated photographer who indirectly taught me most of what I know and believe. I wish only that I had gotten to know him a little better. Although he did not ever actually say anything like the passages below, not even with a fleeting reference, I know these to be at his core. These two quotes are a book of thought to those to whom all efforts have been directed. If they mean nothing to you, the book won't either.

Beholding beauty with the eye of the mind, he will be enabled to bring forth, not images of beauty, but realities, for he has hold not of an image but of a reality. — Plato

Badness you can get easily, in quantity: the road is smooth and it lies close by. But in front of excellence the immortal gods have put sweat, and long and steep is the way to it, and rough at first. But when you come to the top then it is easy, even though it is very hard. — Homer

The 1974 Epitome is dedicated to Jack Hiller, a high school History teacher in Fairfax County, Virginia.

YEARBOOK THEORY
PART II

Every now and then there comes along a man who is different from the rest. He may wear different clothes, he may look a little different, he may act a little different, he might even smell a little different, or he may not. But when one of these dudes bops along and you and he happen to cross paths, be aware that, although you and he might not get along, he deserves what gets for he is one who gets what he wants, i.e. don't mess with him.

There are alot of garbage yearbooks churned out each year and there's nothing really wrong with garbage; flies dig it and many a good man has lead an honorable career at the toting of said refuge. But the only reason a book is garbage is because the staff and/or editor has not made an emotional commitment to the project. It is exactly like photography as a hobby or profession: the photographer must be emotionally involved if anything other than garbage is to result. It's really not that difficult. All that is necessary is a little determination and a couple of ideas to act as a foundation and everything else snaps into place. That little determination turns out to be not so little but it's got to start somewhere; and the couple of ideas should be good ones, ones good enough to drive you mad untill you see them in print.

Want to be a little kid again or at least simulate it pretty well? Use every screen and duotone offered by the publisher with every special effect thrown in on top. And rest assured that somewhere, be it at the plant or in a remote dorm, somewhere someone is laughing at you, or worse, sitting in a grim silence at what a total abortion sits in his lap. The potential of the publisher is awesome: even though it is obvious that all the combinations of special effects could not be exhausted some staffs are of such a subtle comprehension that they try, while also managing to wreck their precious book. Aesthetics are the reasons, not techniques.

One of the best and most famous portraits of a great photographer is of Henri Cartier-Bresson, informally caught with a huge grin on his mug and that Leica cocked in its normal position, which is pressed to the chest with the left hand wrapped around the short telephoto; he sleeps with the damn thing; he eats with it; he craps with it; and so when you read or hear about the camera becoming an extension of the eye and part of the body, you may refer to this portrait as living inanimate proof of the solution to photojournalism on a large scale. This is the technique employed for the photo essay. Very simple.

See the guy below? Bold basturd, ain't he? Look's like an asshole, too, doesn't he? Well, if your not an asshole, your gonna have trouble doing a job; and if you do a job, you'll probably be a flaming arse when you finish. Simple.
